Currently the finances are healthy and there has been recent success with fundraising, yet income trends are declining. The Finance Team and Synod Council's work on financial strategy will address this and work towards sustainability. There are recommendations from the Finance Team for simplification, modification, and consolidation in the financial structure to support the work of the synod. A policy has been drafted for managing investments that aligns with the different kinds of funds that the synod manages, including cash reserves, short-term investment considerations with high liquidity, a modest endowment that would be good to grow over time for longer term considerations without great need for liquidity, and funds established by donors and Synod Council. The team has been developing strategies to address the decline in mission support. Bishop has asked the team how the synod can operate more like a non-profit—nimble, entrepreneurial, and more assertive in seeking resources. Cost-reductions have also been a focus of the team, as has consideration for how we approach and probably expand fundraising for the synod as well as for congregational stewardship efforts. The hope is to have the ability to fund immediate and emerging ministries while also growing the permanent endowment to provide regular dollars to fund programs and operations and align fundraising to invite folks into opportunities to give. The Finance Team will bring recommendations to Synod Council this summer for action
