sing Reckless Love

What can this song teach us about listening?

“The reason it resonates with me personally is because of the judgement and pressure we so often put on ourselves. The concept of unconditional love is difficult to grasp, especially when we are not feeling like our best selves. When I sing this song, it elicits an emotional response every time because it’s such a beautiful reminder that if we stop and listen regardless what we think of our selves and what we hear from the world, God knows who we are and loves us beyond any possible imagination. If we can pause and listen, that provides a space for God to remind us that He is there and loves our full being.”

How could this song be incorporated into worship/life?

“This song is an awesome invitation to everyone, no matter where they are faith exploration. The lyrics are accessible to wherever you are on your journey. It’s a rare worship song that bridges the gap of preference in worship style and theological depth to speak to shared experience . Singing this song collectively in worship is a great way to remind people that we have the freedom to be completely open in community, without worry about what others say about you when it comes to your relationship with God.”
